The morn furthers a man on his road and furthers him too in his work.

A student is found in books, or work or healthful leisure.

Food nourishes the body and refreshes the mind for work.

What is it but a map of busy life, its fluctuations, and its vast concerns?

Is not true leisure one with true toil?

We are ever in the busy companies of men.

Long it is to the end of the day.

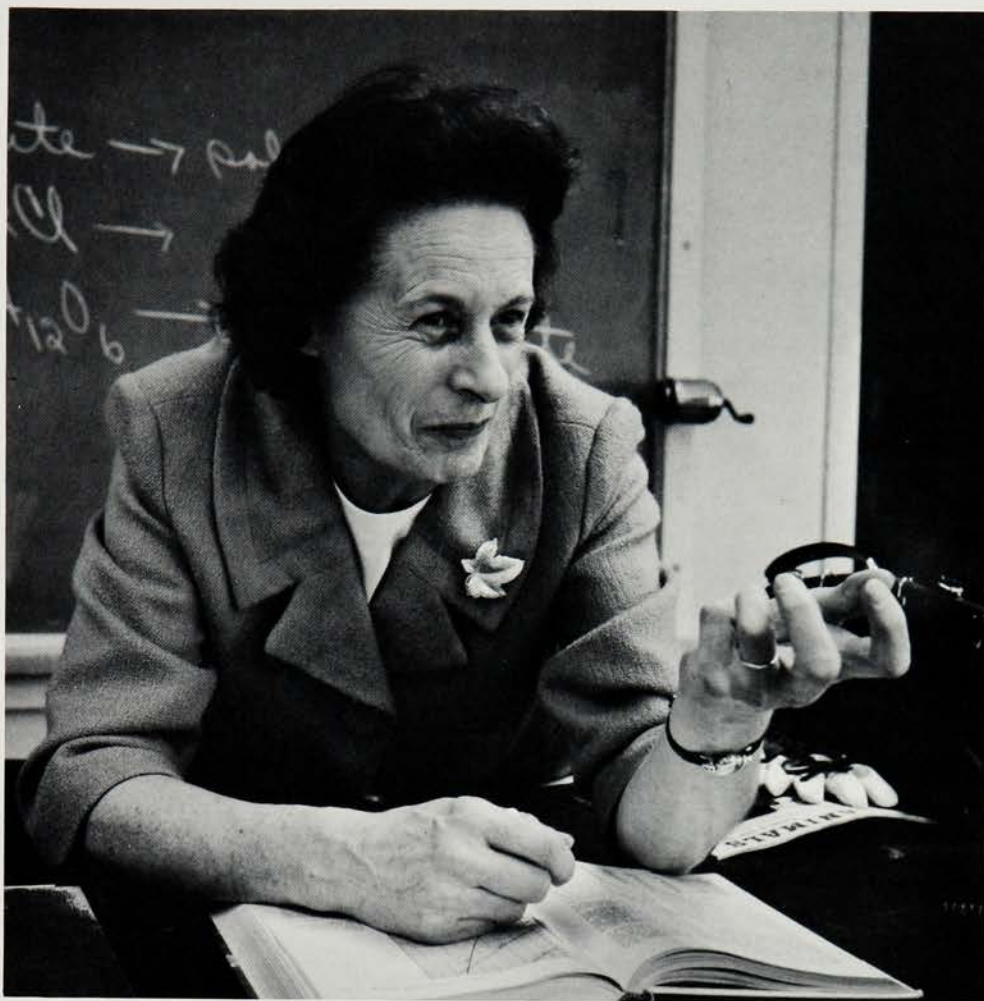

Evening brings all that the light-giving dawn scattered.

dedication

Mrs. Wayne Hunter

None of us are quite sure how that little piece of algae is going to complement the dinner party that we are sure to hold on the moon in the year 1970, but Mrs. Hunter has already prepared the menu. The recipes are bound to be as unusual as predicted by the scientists for the future, and she will, no doubt, know them all after having studied nuclear physics at Howard University last summer. Every summer, in order to study a branch of science, Mrs. Hunter is given a scholarship in recognition of her high intelligence and also to keep her up with the latest "Fungi-Soufflés" — a dish common people may recognize if announced as "mushrooms." We also think that it may be necessary to warn these guests that they are just as likely to accidentally drink a little nitric acid as they are their coffee when the "mad scientist" is around.

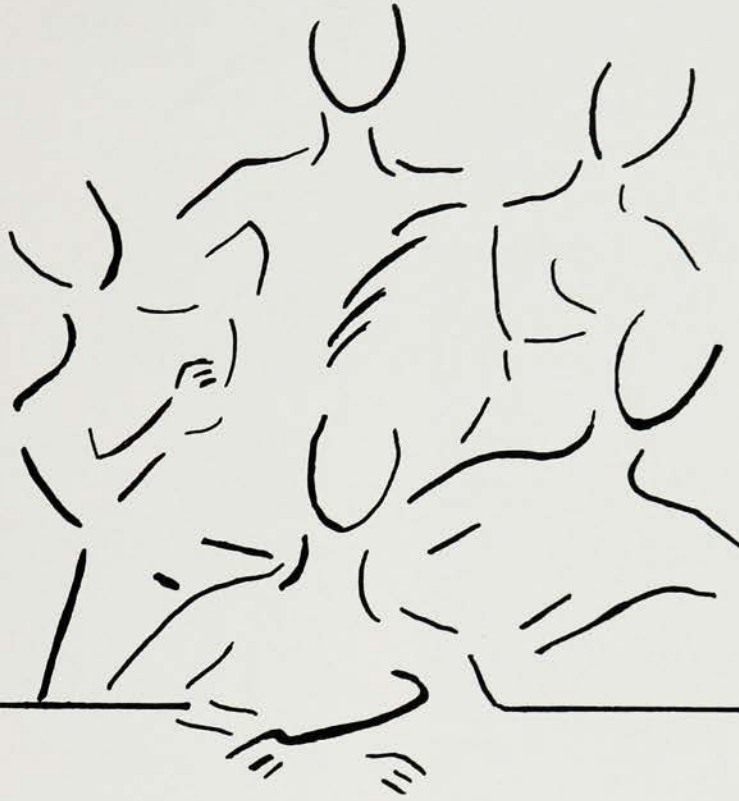

Being a woman who lives for the future, she has undoubtedly jotted down our guest list. It being seldom that she heeds the narrow conventions that limit the rest of us, it is quite possible that she would shock everybody by daring to seat an electron next to a proton when everybody KNOWS that the two cannot stand each other's presence. However, we will have to expect the unusual to occur, because it usually does when Mrs. Hunter comes around.

We, as her guests, know that she will be the center of attraction at the party. She is a fascinating woman to listen to. Quite unable to confine herself to one subject at a time, she may suddenly jump from the subject of regeneration to the smog problems in her beloved New York.

No matter how crowded the party, how confusing or chaotic, we will be just as delighted to have Mrs. Hunter as our hostess in 1970 as we are to dedicate our yearbook, "Cupola," especially to her this year of 1967.

Mr. Peter D. Pelham

How difficult it is to write an appropriate June message in January; how difficult to imagine final examinations and graduation festivities when snow and ice still cover the ground. But since we have entered the new year, it is at least easier to think in terms of 1967 and realize that this is your year, the year of your commencement.

Commencements not only connote a sense of completion, the awarding of diplomas and degrees for work accomplished, but also signify a beginning, a new phase in one's life. On this occasion, therefore, I would like to request that as each of you approaches your 1967 graduation you think especially about two precious and related elements which constitute principal and integral parts of one's commencement in life.

Remember first the passage from St. Paul's letter to the Corinthians which we have read together often, particularly that part which begins "But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away." It suggests so much of what you have been working towards — a fulfillment, a sense of completion — and it concludes with what is in Paul's mind, the summum bonum, the supreme good, for all mankind: Love.

How appropriate this passage is to all of us and how timeless its meaning and intent. It is altogether fitting, therefore, that the author of The Prophet, writing in another age, should think of the relationship between time and love and write accordingly:

And is not time even as love is, undivided and paceless?

But if in your thought you must measure time into seasons,

let each season encircle all other seasons,

And let today embrace the past with remembrance and the future with longing.

The year 1967 marks but one commencement for you in a lifetime full of graduations. I hope that at each stage your development will reflect increasingly sensitive understanding of both love and time and that you will find many occasions to use that knowledge well in service to your fellow man.

student council

This year the Student Council is composed of eleven girls who have had more work and responsibility than formerly, despite the decreasing size of the school. In previous years the school was run only on the Honor Code, but this year the Student Council has added a demerit system. During the school year, the council sets aside a week or two during which the students compete for the fewest demerits and straightest chapel lines. Each student in the winning class earns the privilege to leave school after her last appointment for one week.

The chief objective of the council this year might be said to be to instill the spirit that has always distinguished Mount Vernon from other schools.

house council

House Council consists of a president, four prefects, two proctors, and advisors. Each prefect is assigned to one of the halls, and the proctors help keep order on the underclassmen halls. Two advisors are present at Council meetings.

On Halloween night the seniors surprised the underclassmen with a shower of candies. I'm dreaming of a ninety-eight-pound Santa Claus . . . the Christmas party was a riot. During the early part of February, Mr. Pelham treated the boarders to a movie. Events such as these allow the boarders to relax and have a good time . . . breaths of fresh air, sort of . . .

Not so much fun is having to welcome visitors at Council meetings. House Council is the student government of the dormitory, and amassed "warnings" result in visits to the Council for admonitions and spankings; i.e., swabbing the deck of the rec. room after the smoking hours.

SMITHVILLE, TENNESSEE

FOUR YEARS

"Thanks because I still can see the bloom on the white magnolia tree."

Four years ago, a dark-headed lass from the now-famous, but, at one time, obscure place of Smithville, Tennessee, found herself in a funny little girls' boarding school which soon found her. As class president, you would find "Mare" up at dawn scribbling away at new ideas for the class projects. Today as head of the student body, there are no crack-of-dawn preparations, but only scurrying from the dean's office to the president's; there are benevolent speeches from the pulpit. Most characteristic of "Adelaide" are her day dreams of "Watcha'-callit?" down in Tennessee, her room, a little on the messy side and her chip-toothed grin.

"It is better to debate a question without settling it, than to settle without debate."

"Belligerent! That's what you are — belligerent!" Perhaps if you don't really know Cinny you think that. Our senior class president, Cinny, has no qualms about stating her opinions or asking a question, and she will always stand out in a crowd and in the usual disorder of class meetings. Whether roaring down the Commons on a pair of roller skates or scrambling for her suitcase to Mexico and now Italy, she creates a state of perpetual chaos. If you ever want to find her, go down to that little Mexican restaurant. "Yup" — underneath the stacks of hot tamales, enchiladas, and cigarette fumes — that's our Cinny!

"Always prepared, yet never quite ready."

Sheri may be one of the youngest seniors but she has proved herself to be one of the mainstays of the school as president of our honor society, the head of as many class committees as she could be put on, and receptor of many mathematical awards. A down-to-earth, practical girl, Sheri may still be ruffled by everyday problems, but she is never overcome by them. Driving before she was sixteen? Sheri? Never! But one can get a license in Virginia at fifteen, remember? We know that Duke University will appreciate Sheri's many qualities.

"I'll be as merry as a pie."

Although Regan pretends to be hurt when teased about her height, she actually enjoys the attention. Everything in Regan's world is "lunchy" and "flashed upon," and everyone in it is a "pie" or a "potato." Since she always has something to say, Regan often unconsciously gives her teachers competition in class. Boiling with excitement and enthusiasm, she rarely stops giggling, but, once settled down, "Rege" is an ardent, competent leader, as shown by her effective presidency of Social League.

"Inner sunshine warms not only the heart of the owner, but all who come in contact with it."

Mayfair is a breath of fresh air in the senior class. Whenever she breezes into a room, an inevitable half-grin is implanted on her face, and cheerful remarks naturally pour out. Not only does "Maypole" breeze into a room, but she breezes up the hockey field, down the basketball court, and around the baseball diamond. But "May" can be quiet also. She is quiet in her sympathy for others and their problems, and she is quiet in her studiousness. It is through "May's" actions that we remember her best.

Never still, always bubbling with energy, Nancy can be seen dancing around before class, teasing someone or making faces in her seat. Though not noticeable at first, "Nance" has a mind of her own which is illustrated by her untypical outfits, her unexpected remarks, and a personality uninfluenced by other people. Nancy may not be sympathetic but she'll always listen.

The class officers were Cindy Beasley, president, Kate Williams, vice president, Becky Bean, secretary, and Nan Lyles, treasurer.

In October the seniors gave us an informal party complete with skits at Anne West's home. In preparation for the Junior-Senior Banquet, the class sponsored "Around the World with '68," a most successful fashion show at the Governor's House. The clothes were from Tweeds N' Things.

Soon, the class' attention turned to the banquet, held in April, in honor of the seniors. After many months of hard work, the Juniors presented "Encore '67." The themes of the skits were taken from famous Broadway plays. Then, following the skits, came the memorable ringing ceremony.

The members of the Junior class have shown responsibility in the projects that they have undertaken. Their spirit has enthusiastically illustrated that they are capable of leadership for their last year at Mount Vernon.

chapel guild

This organization provides the Mount Vernon student with an opportunity for religious worship. Three mornings each week one student or faculty member stands at the pulpit and speaks on a subject which may be taken from the Bible, an applicable article, or from some of the person's ideas. This Christmas, the Chapel Guild presented a service of lessons and carols. Each winter the club takes a trip to Natural Bridge, Virginia for a religious conference sponsored by the Council on Religion in Independent Schools in conjunction with other private schools.

Chapel Guild gives their thanks to Miss Gutheim for her assistance in the fulfillment of the club's goals.

"From the desk of Molly Peck" come some of the strangest requests: "You know the children at the Neighborhood House like peanut butter sandwiches, take about one hundred bags." "Take crossword puzzles for Mrs. _____ at the hospital — she's bored."

This year Lend-a-Hand has contributed to many Washington charity organizations: United Givers' Fund, Drew Elementary School for underprivileged children, and has, in addition, supported a Greek girl under the "Foster Parents" plan. The services contributed by Lend-a-Hand are many: weekly visits to the Georgetown Neighborhood House (At Christmas time the club gave a party for them); bi-weekly visits to the CARE offices to package and label boxes; Saturday morning's "nurses' aids" at the Columbia Hospital for Women.

Roo is reprimanded more than once in the play, "Winnie the Pooh."

"Ready everybody, kill the houselights, curtain up," and the Prep Players were on their way toward another dramatic season. At Christmas, the cast along with its various departments, worked together enthusiastically to produce "Winnie-the-Pooh." A performance was given for the children of neighboring schools, and the next evening it was presented to parents and friends. On the twenty-first of April, Prep Players presented "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay" to an intent audience of fathers and their daughters. A great success! Though the size of the club has diminished with our smaller school, its quality has remained and it has continued to put on excellent performances led by Gaby Egger and advised by Mrs. Heflin, the director. Prep Players extends its thanks to Mrs. Heflin for the great help she has given to the girls.

athletic association

"Bang" went the cap gun at the Yellow-White Picnic to begin the team tug-of-war. The team competition tugged in an exciting fun war throughout the year in hockey, basketball, tennis, and softball games. The A.A. presented tremendous ideas to raise money for the banquet in May: bakesales at the home basketball games; the Faculty-Student Basketball Game; and a Slave Raffle, which sold all A.A. members, including Mrs. Cannon, to students and faculty members.

All the excitement, screaming, cheering and clapping at the games ended enthusiastically at the annual Athletic Association Banquet, where awards for athletic achievement were presented. The final tug-of-war was resolved by the winning of the team plaque and banner.
